THE EXPOSITIONS

Three months from today the San Diego Exposition will be opened to the world. On this day occurs the formal opening of the Panama Canal whose completion is to be celebrated by the two expositions at San Francisco and San Diego. No other event has been marked by celebrations of this sort, and no other event has been of such prime importance to the country which is celebrating. The striking features of the expositions is that they are celebrations not alone of something which is completed and gone on, but rather of something which is ahead; they might be considered as heralding the mightier growth of the West thru presenting to the world the opportunities the West offers.

Europe today is plunged in the greatest war of all time, and in 1915 will not receive the 500,000 American tourists who have gone there each year. Since those tourists cannot go to Europe they are coming beyond a doubt to the West coast, and here they will see sights beside which those of Europe, and Asia, and Africa amount to little. No other country in the world has the majestic harmony of sea and canyons and mountains and forests and valleys beneath the clear blue sky of the American West.

But it is more than a scenic tour. It is a voyage of discovery for the men of the East who know nothing of the opportunity that is awaiting them on the coast. They know vaguely that the Canal will bring the West coast much nearer the older cities of the East and across the Atlantic. They do not realize that the hinterland of the west coast is going to be opened up to industry and commerce for the reason that the railroads from the coast will carry traffic from the East ever the mountains, and from the back country out to the coast and back to the East again.

The great service of the Expositions will be to bring people thru the West country. It will be to show them what the West country offers in the way of agricultural development. That is the prime reason for the emphasis which the San Diego Exposition is laying upon its agricultural features—the most important agricultural exhibit which has ever been held. Visitors to the world's fairs of former years saw farming machinery standing idle in a great hall of machinery, and paid little attention to it because they could not understand it fully. At San Diego they will see this machinery but it will be at work in a tract sown to various grains and grasses moving up and down the rows, performing just the same service it is supposed to perform on the great farms of the West. Of such an exhibit they will have an undertaking. They will look long and they will remain long. And those visitors to whom the operation of an 80 or 160 acre farm can mean little, will also see the model intensive farm down the Alameda where on five acres of land is grown as much as on four or five times as much space under old conditions. The effort is to show that new ideas have come about, and that today by scientific methods the farmer can support himself and his family easily, and lay aside a considerable surplus annually from one of these small tracts. It is a lesson of importance to the city man who has had little success and wants to leave the city, but does not know how to get back to the land. Mighty things have been done in the West in recent years, but there are still mightier things to be done, because the resources of the great West are hardly tapped as yet.

Similar in spirit is showing old things in new form is the display of the Southern Counties, whose citrus orchard lies along the Alameda directly across from the model intensive farm. Instead of seeing a great stack of oranges and lemons and grapefruit, the visitor will see the citrus fruits growing on the trees. He will be able to smell the fragrance of the blooms. He will discover that the orange really grows on a tree instead of growing in which he has always seen it in the fruit displays back East.

Adjoining this citrus orchard is the tea plantation which has been brought to San Diego from Ceylon. The 200 tea plants are in charge of a Singaporean nurseryman, and thruout 1915 the natives will cultivate the trees and strip from them the commercial tea leaves, turning them over to the girls who will cure them and prepare them for serving to visitors in the pavilion at the center of the plantation. The progress made in the two months during which they have been growing at San Diego, indicates that Sir Thos. Lipton's experiment has been successful and that tea of good commercial value can be grown in the Southwest. There are distinct possibilities for a great American industry of the future.

The Painted Desert: Just within the north gate a San Diego at the head of the Isthmus lies the "Painted Desert" of the Santa Fe Railway, the most imporeant Indian exhibit which has ever been staged. Starting out with an estimated cost of $100,000, it is now thought likely the expenditure by the Santa Fe will considerably exceed that amount. The "Desert" is divided by a mesa running north and south. High in the rock which covers this mesa on the west slope are the habitations of the cliff-dwellers. In cactus filled sands below them rise the habitations of the Navajos and the other wandering tribes, with here and there a "hogan" or log house of the Navajos, set up and housing its red inhabitants. A shallow arroyo runs thru this little village. On the east slope of the mesa is a great pueblo modeled after the ancient one at Taos. In that same section is a Zuni pueblo, and nearby lies a Hopi pueblo, with a row of small adobe houses of the Rio Grande tribesmen filling in the far side. The interior of the adobe houses is like that of the governor's palace at Santa Fe. There are trading posts, and corrals for horses and for sheep and goats and cattle. Almost in the center are two "kivas", one of the ancient variety, entirely underground; the other of later date, in which the roof of the "kiva" is a few feet above the ground surface. There are outcroppings of rock thru the sand and the rock is uniformly a close copy of the red sandstone with the occasional lurid colors which appear in the real Painted Desert of Arizona. The cactus and much of the rock and the cedar posts have been brought from New Mexico and Arizona.

A dozen or two of the red men have been at San Diego for two or three months building the pueblos and the adobe houses, and making sure that in the smallest details the vivid resemblance to real Southwest Indian life is carried out.

On the Desert all thru the year the red men will be weaving their rugs and blankets, shaping their pottery, and pounding out metal ornaments as they and their ancestors have done for centuries. Each night in the kivas will be performed the ceremonial rites of the various tribes represented on the Desert.

Around the entire Painted Desert runs an adobe wall with an occasional gap which is filled with a stockade of cedar posts. The Desert has already proved, even in its uncompleted condition, one of the most striking attractions on the grounds.

No exposition is complete without its amusement concessions. At San Diego there is a street 2500 feet long, having a frontage consequently of nearly one mile, which today is practically entirely allotted. Applications for several hundred feet of space have been rejected because the managers of the Exposition felt the attractions offered were old and were not worthy of an exposition which claims to have created new types in every department. The result is a street which San Diego fully believes to be the best amusement street which has been built. Several concessions are ready operating.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Farmers sow more wheat and prepare for bigger crops in every way. This is the advice that comes from every business center. If the war in Europe continues, and every indication is that it will be a long drawn out struggle for supremacy, the value of bigger crops will be realized by all classes before another year has come and gone. Rockcastle farmers have never produced enough to supply the county by nearly one half, and this is something that should not be. A little more and better farming is all that Rockcastle needs and we have the evidence sufficient to say, that the farmer who is making a kind of a failure it is more the farmer than the farm. Goods box whittling, street corner gossiping and a thousand other ways of killing time, accounts for many a failure on the farm and in business as well. The business man who stays with his business, most generally succeeds, and likewise the farmer who stays with his farm, not many have ever been known to go hungry.

The Farm Smokehouse

According to newspaper report the farmers in Brooks county, Ga. have gone back to the old-fashioned smokehouse system of curing their bacon.

As a consequence of this return to first principles Brooks county is becoming famous for bacon. Last year the county gained considerable publicity by reason of a "bacon parade," the feature of which was a large number of farm wagons laden with the hickory cured products of the farm smokehouses.

A few years ago the Brooks county farmers marketed their hogs on the hoof. Eventually they became tired of seeing the pork which they sold for 6 to 8 cents a pound brought back in the shape of bacon and hams and sold in their own markets for 20 to 25 cents a pound. On occasions some of them were compelled to buy bacon, and they began to find fault with a commercial system which was responsible for such results. They got together and talked the matter over, and the outcome was the determination to re-establish the ante-bellum smokehouses. Now most of them are killing their hogs and curing their meats in the old-fashioned way, and thru co-operation they are marketing their hogs in the fashionable product. They find that their profits are larger than when they sold their hogs on the hoof, despite the fact that curing the meat involves considerable labor and expense.

The passing of the old-time smokehouse from so many farms is to be regretted. No better method of curing meat has been discovered. The prime product of the best-equipped modern packing house is not equal to the carefully-cured bacon from the farm. The growth of the packing business has, in a manner, driven the farm smokehouse out of existence, but at least one county in the United States is demonstrating that real country bacon is still in demand—and that with proper system the farmers can make it and market it to their financial advantage.—Courier Journal.

CANDIDATES ARE OUT OF RACE

Hon. Nat. B. Sewell and John
A. Creech Fail To File
Certificates

OPPONENTS GET TOGETHER

Mr. Sewell Issues Open Letter to the Voters of the Eleventh Congress-sional District, in Which the Situation is Clearly Explained.

(Special.)—By the simple expedient of refraining from filing certificates of nomination with the Secretary of State in time to get their names on the November ballot, Nat. B. Sewell, of London, Democratic nominee for Congress in the Eleventh district, and John A. Creech, of Harlan, Progressive nominee, have left the field open for John H. Wilson, of Barbourville, Independent, to defeat Congressman Cate Powers for re-election, with the combined strength of Democrats, Progressives and Independent Republicans behind him.

Mr. Sewell came to Frankfort and filed Wilson's petition with the Assistant Secretary of State before the time limit expired at midnight last night. By agreement neither he nor Creech filed their certificates of nomination so the only names which will appear on the ballots in the Eleventh district will be those of Wilson and Powers. Wilson represented the district in Congress two terms several years ago. All the other candidates nominated at the August primary have filed their certificates.

In an open letter addressed to the voters of the Eleventh district, explaining the situation, Mr. Sewell says:

Mr. Sewell's Letter.

"London, Ky., Oct. 5, 1914.—To the Voters of the Eleventh Congressional District:

"As I did not file my certificate of nomination in the office of the Secretary of State before midnight of October 3, limit of the time for such filing, my name will not appear upon the official ballot on November 3 as the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Eleventh district. Neither did Judge John A. Creech, of Harlan, the Progressive nominee, file his certificate of nomination. Therefore, the only candidates who have qualified and whose names will appear upon the ballot for Congress in the Eleventh are Cate Powers, of Barbourville, Republican nominee, and John H. Wilson, of Barbourville, Independent, whose petition was filed in the office of the Secretary of State last Saturday, October 3. In view of this, I deem it proper at this time to make you a brief statement regarding the situation in our district in this contest for the office of Representative in Congress.

"In 1910, when Mr. Powers made his first race upon a party plea of 'vindication,' though partisan prejudice was running strong and the district was normally Republican by about 15,000 votes, he received a large Republican vote, cutting Mr. Powers' majority below that received by Judge E. C. O'Rear, Republican candidate for Governor in 1911. In 1912 Mr. Powers received 18,531 votes, but the combined vote of his opponents was 21,388, which showed that there were nearly 3,000 more voters in the district who opposed him than supported him. In the opposition was divided and Mr. Powers won over Judge Ben V. Smith, his nearest opponent, by 6,771 votes and Mr. Seavy by 9,487.

"Now, after making strong public statements that he did not intend to be a candidate again, giving as a chief reason that he did not care to be in Congress where he would be unable to accomplish any constructive legislation for this district, he is asking the people to return him to Congress for a third term. Surely, Mr. Powers' warmest friends can not urge his election this time on the ground of 'vindication,' for if the people of the Eleventh owed him 'vindication' they have twice paid the debt; if not, they have paid twice too often. And certainly no one can justify a claim that his record of the past two terms in Congress would entitle him to a third. Then, why should he be elected?

Opposition to Powers.

"I have not the slightest doubt that fully two-thirds of our voters, coming from all political parties, feel that Mr. Powers should be retired from Congress and some man elected who could and would be of positive service to the district. The other third is composed of two elements; one that glories in following him blindly as a kind of martyr hero, and the other that supports him simply because he is the nominee of their political party and their sense of loyalty to the party emblem is so strong that they will not under any circumstances vote against any candidate whose name appears under the emblem. With the one-third who want Mr. Powers in Congress I have no quarrel; they have a perfect right to support him. With the two-thirds who do not want him I desire to co-operate by using all honorable means to accomplish his defeat.

"When I became a candidate I believed that Mr. Powers could be defeated by uniting all honorable means to accomplish his defeat. I believed that Mr. Powers could be defeated by uniting the opposition to him in the three leading parties. After becoming better acquainted with the sentiment over the district I believed it more strongly. However, it is a hard proposition to get Republicans, Democrats and Progressives to unite upon a candidate running under either of these party devices. The only common ground upon which they can meet without feeling that they are aiding a rival party is upon an independent candidate.

"Finding this sentiment very strong among the opposition to Mr. Powers and feeling that I had no right to let my candidacy stand in the way of a plan that would be fair and satisfactory to members of all parties, I proposed to Judge Creech that both of us give a clear track to an independent candidate. He agreed to my proposal. In conferring with members of the different parties as to the most desirable candidate to run as an independent, John H. Wilson, former Congressman, of Barbourville, was suggested in almost every instance. Then I consulted Mr. Wilson and later Mr. Creech, and I met him together. He did not at any time ask either of us to withdraw in his favor, but said he was willing to make the race provided the opposition to Mr. Powers in the different parties desired it and Mr. Creech and myself felt it the best course to follow.

"Thus it came about that Mr. Wilson is opposing Mr. Powers for Congress. I have made the statement many times, and in my speech at Somerset last Monday that I would support any man whom I believed could be of higher and stronger service to the Eleventh district than myself in making this race. I believe Mr. Wilson is the man, and I trust all those in all parties who have meant to support me or Judge Creech and many others who would not have supported either of us, will use all honorable means to elect Mr. Wilson, and I fully believe this will be done. Sincerely yours, NAT. B. SEWELL."

DREADFUL

Conflicts on Continent Where the War Rages Are Most Alarming, According to Those Engaged.

London, Oct. 5.—Letters from the front, arriving now in London, sent back by the troops in the trenches to relatives at home give some interesting sidelights on the war.

A young officer who has seen the whole course of the campaign from the landing of the British troops writes:

"I wish you would try to make the people in England understand that they should be most exceedingly thankful that they are living on an island and not in the midst of the dreadful things which are happening on the Continent. Do enforce upon the public that England must fight this thing out, and must conquer even if it has to spend the blood of its young men like water. It will be far better that every family thruout England should have to suffer sorrow for one of its members than that England should have to go thru similar ordeals to those which continental countries are suffering.

"The sight of old women and men fleeing from village to village with their few personal effects on their backs, or some fortunate cases with their goods and chattels surrounding the aged grandmother stored away in an old farm cart, drawn by a nag too venerable to be of service to the state; this is seen daily. Picture to yourselves our night marches with burning villages on all sides set fire to by German shells—and the Germans have been rather careless whether their shell struck fortified and defended positions or open ones. In some cases the fires were caused intentionally by marauding patrols.

"Do not imagine that things are not going well with us. We are satisfied and confident of the end; but at the same time the only possible end can be gained by sacrifice on the part of those at home only. All is well with me personally. I have a busy time, but it is most interesting work.

A Coldstream, Guardsman, writing of the fighting near the forest of Compiègne, compares the sight of the Germans issuing from the trees to a cup final crowd at the Crystal Palace.

"You couldn't miss them. Our bullets ploughed into them but still they came for us. I was well entrenched and my rifle got so hot I could hardly hold it. I was wondering if I should have enough bullets when a pal shouted, 'Up Guards and at 'em.' The next second he was rolled over with a nasty knock on the shoulder. He jumped up and hissed 'Let me get at them.' His language was a bit stronger than that.

"When we really did get the order to get at them we made no mistake I can tell you. They cringed at the bayonet but those on our left wing tried to get around us after racing as hard as we could for quite three hundred yards we cut up nearly every man who did not run away."

Referring to the cavalry he writes: "You have heard of the charge of the light Brigade. It was nothing to our chaps. I saw two of our fellows who were fin-horsed stand back to back and slash away with their swords, bringing down nine or ten of the panic stricken devils. Then they got hold of the stirrup straps of a horse without a rider and got out of the melee. That's kind of thing was going on all day.

"In the afternoon I thought we should all get bowled over, as they came for us again in their big numbers.

Where they came from, goodness knows; but as we could not stop them with bullets they had another taste of the bayonet. My captain, a fine fellow was near to me and as he fetched them down he shouted: Give them socks my lads. How many were killed and wounded, I don't know, but the field was covered with them."

Driver W. Moore of the Royal Field Artillery, who is now in the London Hospital, gives his experience of the fighting at Mons. The latter is addressed to the superintendent of the training ship Cornwall of which Driver Moore, who is not yet 20 years of age is an "old boy." He was wounded in the leg by a piece of shrapnel. He said:

"It was Sunday night when we saw the enemy. We were ready for action but were lying down to have a rest when orders came to stand at our posts. It was about 4 a. m. on Monday when we started to fire; we were at it all day till six p. m. when we started to advance.

"Then the bugle sounded the charge and the cavalry and infantry charged like madmen at the enemy; then the enemy fell back about forty miles, so we held at bay till Wednesday when the enemy was reinforced.

Then they came on to Mons and by that time we had every man woman and child out of the town. We were situated on a hill in a cornfield and we could see all over the country. It was about 3 p. m., and we started to let them have a welcome by blowing up two of their batteries in about five minutes; then the infantry let go and the battles were in full swing.

In the middle of the battle a driver got wounded and asked to see the colors before he died and he was told by an officer that the guns were his colors. He replied: Tell the driver to keep their eyes on their guns we lose our guns we lose our colors."

"Just then the infantry had to retire and the gunners had to leave their guns, but the drivers were so proud of their guns that they went and got them out and we retired to St. Quentin. We had a rollcall and only ten were left out of my battery. This was the battle in which poor Winchester (an old Cornwall boy) lost his life in trying to get the gun away.

C. H. Mullins has sold a half interest in his Tailor shop to R. Gregory of London. Mr. Gregory will have charge of the business and will be prepared to give the very best of service at all. Mt. Vernon has and should have a up-to-date pressing shop and the people should give them a liberal patronage.

There is too much tobacco and too much cotton but not enough wheat this year. Never in the history of the grain market has price for cash October wheat been quite so high. Never has the outlook been more favorable for a big price for the coming crop of wheat. Europe will produce no wheat in 1915 and now is the time for the American farmer to sow wheat.

J. Fish & Son are getting up a collection of corn to display in their corner window. They would like very much to have the prize ear of corn from every farm in Rockcastle County to use in this display. Each ear will be promptly labeled showing who raised it. If you have not already brought your prize ear in they will be glad to have it when you come in Saturday.

A merchant trying to sell goods without advertising is like a lawyer trying to practice law without a law book. He may do a little but it will be hide.

What is the difference between a summer squash and a cymbal? By the way did you ever see the word cymbal in a dictionary. Isn't it shown in the old "Blue back speller?"

SEED CORN. The Government and other experts strongly advise farmers to select their seed corn now. They claim it best to select it from the field and that it is preferable to take it from stalks that bear two ears claiming that "like produces like." This manner of getting seed corn is claimed to have many advantages over selecting in from the crib.

REV. JOHN M. Macmillan.

NOTICE:—For the benefit of the patrons of the Mt. Vernon Power Co., we desire to state, that lamps and fuses can be had by calling at the Signal office. It is a very simple operation to change a lamp or put in a new fuse when one goes dead. Every patron should learn how to look after the fuses especially and we would suggest that each home or business house having lights, keep one or two of these fuses on hand. When your lamps go dark remember nine times out of ten it is the fuse, the other time may be a lamp but most likely it is a fuse the tenth time. The manager of the Power Co. intends that the people shall have service, but it is not a part of his duty or obligation to go and change a fuse or lamp when one goes bad. To try to keep all fuses and lamps over town going, would be a considerable task for one man. We shall be glad to go any where in town and show any one who does not understand how to make the changes, but to simply answer a call to change a fuse or bring a lamp and put up, a nominal charge will be made for each call. We make this statement so that our patrons will understand and we trust will profit by the suggestion. The expense of having some one come from the Power Co. to do what you could do yourself in less time than it would take to do the telephone, we consider unnecessary.

E. S. ALBRIGHT, Manager, MT. VERNON POWER CO.

Better clothes for boys at Fish's.

Peanuts would prove a paying crop if taken up by our farmers.

"Old Cull" says he would run for office of dog pelter at next election if he thought some body would be willing to sign his bond for the proper discharge of that officers duty should he be elected.

The writer thought he was in the premium list when he raised three pumpkins on one vine weighing a total of 75 pounds. He gave it up when C. A. Davis hauled in a 76 pounder Monday.

Mr. R. L. McFerron is in receipt of a letter from Mr. Robt. Spence agent for the United States Experiment Station, located at Berea, who was doing experimental work here during the institute, in which he says that Mr. McFerron has the best crop of corn he has seen in all his travels. This corn field is in the edge of town and here is another evidence of what Rockcastle farmers can do if they only try. A little more up-to-date farming is all Rockcastle needs to raise the agricultural side many folds.

TONED UP WHOLE SYSTEM.

"Chamberlain's Tablets have done more for me than I ever dared hope for," writes Mrs. Esther Mae Baker, Spencerport, N. Y. "I used several bottles of these tablets a few months ago. They not only cured me of bilious attacks, sick headaches and that tired out feeling, but toned up my whole system." For sale by all dealers.

Back in his early days old Cull played the part of prodigal son and wrote back to the old man on one occasion:

"I got religion at camp meeting the other day. Send me ten dollars."

But the old man replied:

"Religion is free. You got the wrong kind."

James Maret, the Boone Way apostle is at Bristol, attending the good roads meeting. If everyone in Rockcastle took the same interest and did the same amount of work for Boone Way that Mr. Maret does, there would be no question about that great thoroughfare being placed upon the map and before the eyes of the people of every state in the Union. Rockcastle citizens and the people all over the entire route should appreciate the efforts of this self-sacrificing citizen for the good of his country. If the present generation does not live to enjoy the fruits of his labors in behalf of this important road, there is no doubt but that future generations will, and let it come when it may, and in whatever form it may; to James Maret will be due much of credit, for he is the man who named it and has placed it where it stands today.
